The vehicle shown here was delivered to the United States of America in 1953. The color combination at the time was azure Blue with a gray leather interior, as the Porsche certificate that we have at hand says. The owner history of the vehicle is lost until the early 1990s. However, contemporary photos show that the car is still in its original condition at the beginning of the 1990s, although the ravages of time have left their mark on this vehicle. At this point, Mr. Paul Wesselink, who had his own paint shop, decided to take care of the Porsche and restore it. But while the restoration work was still in full swing, he sold the car to Mr. Todd Michael Madeiros, a resident of Los Gatos, California. This completed the restoration that had begun. In 2004, Mr. Madeiros parted with his Porsche 356 and sold it to Melbourne, Australia. The new owner, Mr. Trevor Keeley, decided to further revise the car both visually and technically. We still have all the invoices and written histories today. The 356 remained in the same ownership for the next 11 years. In 2015, just prior to the sale to Dutton Garage in Melbourne, Mr Keeley arranged for the engine to be overhauled. The original engine is still in the vehicle. In 2016 the car was bought by Mechatronik and stayed in there private collection till 2024.
